

New York Athletic Club Champions Meet Held on Caspase Point Field

Mercury Footers Outscore Alicia Sails To Victory Pennant Athletes by 55 to 18 On L.I. Sound

Good Performances Shown on Heavy Track; Perelman Wins Quarter-Mile Title by Six Inches; Columbia Is First in Half Mile

By A. G. Cavagnaro

The New York Athletic Club track team fairly trampled over its rivals in winning the point honors in the annual outdoor junior track and field championships of the Metropolitan Association, which were held at Stevens Field, Hoboken, N. J., yesterday. It was the first representation of Winged Foot members in championship competition in two years, owing to the war. The New York squad was made up principally of former college and high school athletes, who showed their superiority over the club entrants by collecting the overwhelming total of 55 points.

It was a hopeless chase the so-called small clubs made for these honors during the afternoon. The Gloucester Athletic Club was the more fortunate in this respect, for the Harlem River boys pulled up in second place with 18 points. They were followed by the Pastime Athletic Club with 15, and the Morrisville Athletic Club with 12. The New York squad was next with 55 points, followed by the Morrisville Athletic Club with 12 points, and the Gloucester Athletic Club with 18 points.

The most sensational finish of the day came in the 400-yard run, in which Jermelan scampers over the finish line barely six inches in front of Mike Pels, a clubmate, with Harry Braverman, Morrisville, second, and the Gloucester Athletic Club, third, in a close finish. The New York squad was next with 55 points, followed by the Morrisville Athletic Club with 12 points, and the Gloucester Athletic Club with 18 points.

Hulsenbeck had little difficulty in defeating his opponents in the half-mile run, although he won by only two yards. He remained behind the pace until the final turn for home, when he swept past two rivals as if they were standing still. He ran the final five yards looking back at his tired opponents. Hulsenbeck represented the New York A. C. and in second place came Al Helfrich, a clubmate, George Buttner, the Jersey runner, led the field until passed by Helfrich fifty yards from home. Hulsenbeck assumed command shortly afterward.

After winning the 220-yard low hurdle event by five yards, Edward W. Markes, of the Knights of St. Anthony, was told he could not have his prize. After quite a debate, Markes learned that his prize was being held up at the request of the registration committee. Markes was informed that his prize had been received a written promise against his amateur standing, as it was notified that Markes had been playing semi-professional baseball for the past three years.

Twenty years is a long time before one succeeds in winning a junior championship, but such was the fate of George Purjes, Captain A. C., before he succeeded in breaking the long string in winning the discus event. He threw the flat missile 112 feet.

Anton Hulman, New York A. C., captured two prizes, but under the rules was entitled only to one. Hulman was entered in the pole vault, and after reporting the bar at 11 feet 5 inches, he reported for the 120-yard high hurdle race. Through the disqualification of a clubmate, Hulman was awarded first prize in the hurdle contest, so that he was forced to vault himself out of the pole vault competition.

George Wood was first over the line, but was disqualified for upsetting three hurdles.

The field contests furnished many close competitions, the best being especially true in the running, hop, step and jump, when the first three contestants were only four inches apart. Donald Brown, New York A. C., was declared the winner, with 4 feet 4 1/2 inches. In the running broad jump, Matt Whitehouse, Gloucester A. C., defeated Ernie Anderson, in a jump-off, while Chris Vrettos, of the Greek-American A. C., put the 12-pound shot 46 feet.

Squire Wins Sweepstakes

D. C. Squire won the ball sweepstakes competition held yesterday over the Essex Fells Country Club course, turning in a low net score of 66. This was five strokes less than the score of R. A. Jacobs, whose net card was 71. Both golfers, who had handicaps of 36 and 31, respectively, turned in gross cards of 102. John Engels, Jr., and E. W. Hunter, with net scores of 72, were tied for third place.

The Scores:

D. C. Squire, 102; R. A. Jacobs, 102; John Engels, Jr., 102; E. W. Hunter, 99-75; J. A. Campbell, 99-75; J. A. Campbell, 99-75; J. A. Campbell, 99-75.

Lena Captures Race for 30-Footers in Seawanhaka Corinthian Regatta

OYSTER BAY, L. I., June 28.—After a lapse of two years, owing to the war, the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club held an open regatta on Long Island Sound under weather conditions that were almost ideal. A glorious north-east wind came whipping across the water as the committee on board former Commodore E. C. Benedict's steam yacht Oneda established a starting line off Lloyd's Point.

It was a splendid breeze for a race. Unfortunately, the number of starters was small in comparison to those in the races that have been held at the western end of the Sound. That was expected, however, as the breeze kept away all but the larger classes.

Although two big schooners had entered, neither came to the starting line, nor were the new sloops of the Larchmont Yacht Club there. The Long Island Sound schooners were on hand, and two of the trim, little double-stickers had a spirited race over a 14 1/2-mile course, the winner being W. Baldwin's Alicia, which defeated E. C. Alker's Allure by 1 minute 15 seconds.

Lena Defeats Adios

Ogden Reid, who has been doing so well in his New York Yacht Club thirty-footer Lena all season, again won in the division, defeating Fred Richards' Adios by 1 minute and 50 seconds over the same course. As the wind came the craft had a reach, a beat and a broad reach home. The thirty-footers also raced on corrected time against Robin Hood III, the only handicapped boat to appear at the starting line. Lena was not so successful in the mixed class, Robin Hood III winning on corrected time by almost 8 minutes.

There was an excellent representation of Greenwich yachts here. Both the Arrow and the one-design class of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club came to the Sound to take part in the regatta. In the former division the winner was Windward II, the property of Richard H. Monks. The Windward II defeated Reni, owned by Clifford D. Mallory, another well-known Long Island Sound Corinthian, by 1 minute and 50 seconds. June Bug won in the one-design class.

Nahma Best in Fish Class

Eight of the fish class sailed over a short course, starting late in the afternoon. The winner was Nahma, the property of Commodore Ralph Ellis, W. E. Roosevelt, who finished third in the Snapper, later reported to DeForest Hicks, chairman of the race, committed him to racing the boat and that he was disqualified.

Championship Contenders

No. 1—Charles Evans, Jr. Just ten years ago this season a brilliant young golfer suddenly stepped out among the title contenders and in the amateur championship of 1909 gave H. Chandler Egan, who had held the sceptre twice, one of the hardest battles of his golfing career.

Evans, after finally reaching the crest at Merion in 1916, will make a desperate defense of his title at Oakmont, Pa., August 1.

One reason is that Evans, having been deprived of his open title at Braeburn, has no yearning to be completely stripped in one year. Another is that he has a great golfing ability he had too much trouble over during the last year to relinquish the crest without a struggle.

Chick's lane of travel to the top was a rocky one. In 1912 he was defeated by a long margin in the putting pile-up on the putting green. He was straight and long from the tee—a marvel with the iron and mashie—after a year he slipped and fell with a few yards to go.

In 1910, at Brookline, he had Bill Fownes 2 down and 3 to play in the semi-final round. More than that in the sixteenth green in one of the 18 holes, Evans took three putts and Fownes took one and the putt followed. In 1911 Chick was dropped by Fred Herreshoff at Apawames, and in 1912 he fell before the deadly putting of Jerry Travers. Wheaton after leading Travers over the first half of the route. Chick's putting fell so badly away that Travers won a matter of six consecutive holes after they had started in the afternoon.

In 1913, at Garden City, he reached the semi-final round with John G. Anderson and once again the putting blight tossed him out of the fray. He was in this match that Chick employed no less than four putters without finding one he could use from within two, three and four feet of the cup.

After these close calls he was dropped in the first round the next two years by Byers at Ekanok and by Merion in 1916, he suddenly began putting well and finally achieved his goal.

Up to the Green

There is no flaw to be found in Evans's game. He is certainly the soundest amateur golfer we have, with no superior among any of the professionals. He works with a machine and a smoothness of a wonderful machine. If you will observe his style you will notice that he uses the same style of stance for every shot, always with the left foot slightly advanced. He does not swing the club until a three-quarter turn, then he tees and in going to this abbreviated stroke he has improved his direction without losing any of his distance. He is a right-handed golfer, but he plays in the way of a left-handed golfer, overlapping his arms and legs. His accuracy can be judged from the fact that in his first thirty-six holes at Braeburn he made only one error, one pit and but one water hazard, and all other respects traveling straight to the pin.

A Matter of Putting

With Evans at Oakmont in defense of his title, it will again be a matter of putting, his one vital weakness through so many years.

FRANK CONWAY (on left) and Chris Vrettos (on right), who stamped their initial effort in the junior championships yesterday by winning titles. Conway, who represented the Morrisville A. C., won the 100-yard dash, and Vrettos, of the Greek-American A. C., captured the shot-put. Both victories were unlooked for, but in each instance veteran athletes bowed to their prowess. Vrettos gives promise of developing into one of the best shot-putters in this district.

Tales of a Wayside Tee

By GRANTLAND RICE

East. On the slower Western greens he has always been far from being a poor putter. But somewhere back in his inner consciousness he has always had the belief that he couldn't putt. His first shock over the swifter slopes has never left him. He has practiced for hours at a time over long periods, and while at times he may put brilliantly, if he misses one or two short ones his confidence disappears and his mind has been wandering in the direction of his golf.

Peckinpough Passes Cobb And Sets Out for Cravath

Aside from the continued consistency of Miller-Huggins's Yankees throughout last week, the most thrilling feature of the national frolic to New York fandom was the reckless abandon with which Captain Roger Peckinpough, of the Huston-Ruppert entry, pursued his bid for the crown which graces the placid brow of Tyrus Raymond Cobb.

Peckinpough's spurt has passed the stage where it can be considered a freak of luck, for in the week just passed he added forty-one per cent points and brought his grand total to a flattering .395. Cobb remained stationary at .358.

Peck is now even threatening the hold of the ancient and honorable Gavy Cravath for the honors of the two major leagues. Old Gavy's figures shrunk by ten points to .408 within the week. Ping Bodie, outside Mogridge, who did not work and who retained his .333, is the only other .300 hitter of the Yanks. His figures are .311. Duffy Lewis is crowding the magic circle with .291.
